

California Brandy.

Until we have grapes sufficient, of which we can make either wines or brandies of our own, as the public taste may then determine, and of whose genuineness we can be positively secure, the next best will be to procure such liquors of the same name and quality, as from their proximity to our own country and being, so to say, within the scope of our observation, recommend themselves as being most probably a genuine article and free from foreign admixture. As such then we recommend the "California Brandy" of James T. McDougall & Co., San Francisco, now for sale in this city by Messrs. Von Holt & Heuck. It resembles in color, taste and strength the best French brandy with the superadded recommendation of being undoubtedly genuine. Price $24 per dozen, duty paid.

The late Gale.

The storm which commenced on Tuesday last, and continued with unabated fury during the whole of Wednesday, was one of the severest that we remember on these Islands. It blew from the Northward and Eastward with a spite that was really frightful to people living out of town in the open country. We have heard of several houses that were blown down and more or less injured and the damage to trees and fences exceeds anything known since the spring of 1850.

On Thursday the clouds broke and the sun looked down upon the havoc, giving hopes that the worst was over; but on Thursday night the gale resumed its play with, if possible, increased force and the super-added accompaniment of such thunder and lightning as only a tropical climate does exhibit.

On Friday the force of the gale was evidently spent, and men conversed about it as a thing of the past, though still casting uneasy and shuddering glances up the valley.
